

Week 10: Disobedience II

JSS1 Christian Religious Studies (CRS) — First Term Lesson Note (Deep-Dive Edition)

Introduction

Following last week's study of the act of disobedience itself, this week examines its consequences — for Adam and Eve personally, and more broadly for humanity and nations.

Consequences of Adam and Eve's Disobedience

Consequence	Description
Expulsion from Eden	Adam and Eve were driven out of the Garden of Eden (Genesis 3:23-24)
Pain in childbirth	Eve was told her pain in childbearing would greatly increase (Genesis 3:16)
Hard labour for food	Adam was told the ground was cursed, and he would toil and sweat to grow food (Genesis 3:17-19)
Broken relationship with God	Sin created separation between humanity and God
Death entered the world	Physical and spiritual death became a consequence of sin (Genesis 3:19; Romans 6:23)
Shame and fear	Adam and Eve immediately felt shame and hid from God

Human Disobedience and National Disobedience

- Human disobedience refers to the ongoing pattern of individuals disobeying God's laws and moral standards, following the example set by Adam and Eve.
- National disobedience refers to entire nations or societies turning away from God's standards — for example, embracing injustice, corruption, or immorality — which the Bible shows can lead to national consequences, just as individual disobedience carries personal consequences.

Real-Life Application

Just as Adam and Eve's disobedience brought consequences into their lives and the world, disobedience today — whether by an individual ignoring rules, or a nation ignoring justice and good moral standards — often leads to negative outcomes. This teaches the value of obedience to God, to parents, to teachers, and to just laws.
