

TOPIC 5: OFFICE CORRESPONDENCE (PART 1)

1. Meaning of Office Correspondence

Office correspondence is the written communication that takes place in or from an organisation. It includes letters, memos, emails, reports and other written messages used to inform, request, instruct or record business matters.

2. Types of Correspondence

- Internal correspondence – within the organisation (memos, internal emails, notices).
- External correspondence – with people or organisations outside (business letters, emails to customers or suppliers).
- Formal correspondence – official tone and structure (official letters, contracts).
- Informal correspondence – less formal notes or messages where appropriate.

3. Importance

Correspondence provides a permanent record, reduces misunderstanding, supports decision-making and maintains professional relationships.

4. Summary

Office correspondence is written business communication. It may be internal or external, formal or informal, and is essential for clear and lasting records.
