

TOPIC 6: OFFICE CORRESPONDENCE (PART 2)

1. Uses of Office Correspondence

- To request information or action
- To give instructions or information
- To confirm agreements and appointments
- To complain or respond to complaints
- To keep official records for future reference

2. Ways Mail Comes into an Organisation

- By post (letters and parcels through the postal service)
- By courier or hand delivery
- By email and other electronic means
- By fax (less common today)
- Through messengers or internal dispatch

3. Summary

Correspondence is used for many business purposes. Mail enters the organisation through post, courier, electronic channels and internal messengers, and must be handled systematically.

End of Topic 6